Summer has finished and like all other Septembers, we are here to make getting back to the routine something pleasant. We've had some fun holidays as we expected they would be (or at least in our case, they've been). With this, we present one of Barry Hilton's dossiers on one of his mega-projects. This time, we'll take the Battle of Ligny and as you can see, the resource deployment is simply spectacular! This is the type of article that makes the rest of us enthusiasts green with envy.

You will find an excellent article on the Naval battles of the 19th century and the usual models and painting apart from the interior dossier. Special attention must be drawn to the article on painting, which has a fantastic demonstration of how to paint a 40 mm figurine (which has been all the rage in the last few months). All this has been expertly done by El Mercenario (the Mercenary).

Without revealing anymore, I close. As usual, I extend my gratitude to our team in the UK and all of you too.

John Kersey
